Entertainment Extra by Evelyn

Q. What outlandish is Patti Lupone ("Life Goes On")? I say she's outspoken. I was told she might be fearless. And was she ever! A. Ms. Lupone is American-born of Italian ancestry. Reborn is her mother.

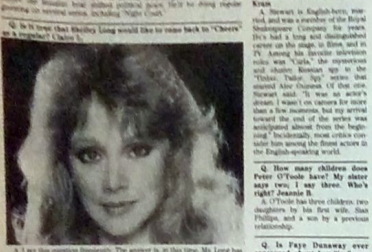
Q. I really like the new kid on "Head of the Class," Jonathan Ke Quan. I know I've seen him in a movie somewhere, but I can't remember which. It was Thanks A Mo.

A. Jonathan played Harrison Ford's sidekick in "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom."

Q. My husband and I were saying that with the changes in Russia, when is Gorbachev going to do for his current enemy he promised to do, depend on making remarks about who Communist system? Beverly S.

A. Yakov, like all smart politicians, spent (earned) to rely on what was becoming a switchable art. He was already branching out into writing and producing. Yakov has studied political power. He'll be doing regular reporting on various series, including "Night Court."

Q. Is it true that Shelley Long would like to come back to "Cheers" as a regular? Carlos S.



A. I get this question frequently. The answer is, at this time, Ms. Long has no plans to return as a regular. There has been some unconfirmed — and unconfirmed talk that she might do a guest spot as Diane Chambers coming to for a brief visit.

Q. Is Faye Dunaway ever concerned about her "icy" personality and performances? Gregg D.

A. Faye says she has matured as an actress and is not the bitch that people perceive her as. In fact, she claims that she is not even the perfectionist anymore that people have known her to be in the past. As for her future acting stints, Faye has stated that she would love to do some comedy, finally.

Q. Does Neil Carter have any children? Ted G.

A. Mr. Carter recently adopted two baby boys. One of the boys is three weeks old and the other is three months of age. Ms. Carter is a single mother as she recently divorced after eight years of marriage.

DEAR DIANE

by Diane Van Arsdale

DEAR DIANE:

In the past, my family and I have had basically a good relationship. Lately, however, there's nothing but trouble going on. Everyone talks about everyone else, and no one gets along anymore. Of course, "family" is always a very important part of one's life, but when it gets to the point where it's nothing but a headache, a person must make a decision as to how to deal with it. The victim in this case is my mother, and I cannot stand back anymore and let this happen. Also, I believe my relatives are going to have a field day with my mother after our family reunion is over this summer. She has always been the best mother in the world, and has been nothing but good to ALL of us. She filled our lives with so much love and joy. I've tried to understand where the others are coming from with some of their remarks, but the same conclusion come to mind every time. They are jealous of our mother, and I believe they always have been. She's smart, beautiful, and strong. Those combined qualities are what set that jealousy off. I haven't made a decision as to what I will do when that day arrives, whether I'll attend the reunion or not. If, indeed, I do attend, they're going to have a rude awakening. I am one who speaks my mind and doesn't mince words. At whatever cost, I must protect the person who has given me the strength to achieve the impossible, and the courage to succeed. Should I convince her not to go, and save her from the humiliation, or just go and support her in the event my intuition is correct? What would you suggest under such conditions?

LIVID

DEAR LIVID:

If you think there's going to be trouble, I suggest you and your mother avoid it. Some families are never happy unless there's some sort of strife, and they'll create it and wallow in it. It sounds rather perverse, but it's true. You and your mother don't have to buy into that. Believe me, once your mother is removed as a target, they'll find someone else on whom to vent their poison. Let them just consume themselves in it, and leave it at that.

DEAR DEX

by Dexter Dyer

DEAR DEX:

I'm from a small town in the south, and the economy here is not good, and there are no good paying jobs. My wife and I have two children now, and I just found out that a third is on the way. We hadn't planned on having another child until we were on our feet again. We're going through some rough times, and to have another child at this point could be disastrous. We barely get by now, and I have no idea how we would manage with another. I don't necessarily want to ask my wife about an abortion, but I don't see any other way at this point. I personally would love to have another child, just not now. I would hate to bring children into a world that would be hard and rough. Are there any alternatives available to us that I haven't thought of?

DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE:

Actually, there are several options you haven't considered. The most drastic are adoption or foster care. However, I will go on the assumption that these are out of the question, if anything else can possibly be worked out. I think the best thing to do is contact your local social services agency. Ask about what public assistance would be available to you and your family. Chances are good that you qualify for food stamps, or perhaps even welfare. Please don't think of these things as charity. These programs are available to offer a helping hand when needed. Don't let pride stand in the way. After all, this is what you pay taxes for. I would also suggest that you and your wife go to your local Planned Parenthood agency and ask about birth control so you can avoid unwanted pregnancies. This excellent organization provides medical care to those in need, often at little or no charge. Good luck, and my prayers are with you.

Antiques and Collecting

Q. Can you tell me anything about old decals? I have found a number of sheets of decals that seem to have been used in bathrooms and kitchens in the 1940s.

A. Decals have been used to decorate dishes and furniture, among other things. About 1860, a French patent was given for a decal to be used to decorate fancy dishes. Other early decals were printed on glass to imitate stained glass. Different churches often used religious decals in their windows. By 1875, decals were available in thousands of designs, and most of them were made in Europe.

The early decals were prints on paper. Varnish was brushed on the paper; then when the varnish began to stiffen, the decal was applied to the window, smoothed on, and later the backing paper was rubbed off with a moist cloth.

Many types of dishes were made with the help of decals. Early plates were made with "transfers," designs made from tissue paper printed with special ink. By the late 19th century, the colored picture was applied to a dish and then fired in place to bring out the colors. The finished plate resembled a hand-painted piece.

In the 1930s, the decal became popular for decorating children's rooms. These decals or transfers were made like the modern types. The paper was soaked in water, then rubbed on the lamp shade, chair or wall. The paper was removed and the picture protected with a coat of varnish. By the 1940s, a temporary decal that could be used like a tattoo became popular. These were called "cockamanias." Other decals were made to be used on cupboards or furniture, then removed with a special chemical.

Q. I have a bronze figure of a woman in a Greek robe. She is holding an arrow and quiver. The figure is 10 inches high. It is signed "Mathurin Moreau."

A. Moreau worked as a sculptor in France from 1842 to 1912. He is best known for his statues and bronzes of female figures.

ALL MY CHILDREN: Brooke admitted she might be falling for Adam all over again too. Adam became furious when he learned Brooke was paying his folks and insisted he wanted her out of his life. When Bianca asked Erica to remarry Travis, Erica assumed this was the sign she'd prayed for to repay God a favor by dumping Dr. Hart. Later in asking for a prostrate, Susan turned and was shocked to see her client was her father. Ted and Dixie agreed to discuss both Palmer and Opal to save their marriage. Jeremy encouraged Skye to attend A.A. meetings. Wait To See: Donna becomes uneasy as Emily Ann falls more deeply under Billy Clyde's influence.

ANOTHER WORLD: Ken went off to deal with the poachers while Rachel hid in the cave. He returned to find only rocks and rubble. Meanwhile, Cass and Frankie, who had been captured by the poachers, escaped. Sam warned Evan to stay away from his wife. Jake decided to tell Vicky that he planned to go after Donna. Paulina was scared seeing Ted, someone from her past, at the hospital. Grant, upset by John's diagnosis that he has only a few years to live, went to a party and met Shelly. Wait To See: Rachel faces new dangers.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Lily attended Iva's session with Dr. Michaels and heard her admit her feelings that her pregnancy ruined her life. Sean suspected Courtney may be in New York with Gail, his former girlfriend. Caleb and Julie opened a joint bank account. Andy had pictures developed that showed an out of focus girl on his hotel bed. Susan started ballotinating and called Bob. Wait To See: Andy's alcoholic problems take him on a dangerous path.

BOLD & THE BEAUTIFUL: Beth, who had decided on a divorce so she could marry Eric after his divorce from Stephanie, was crushed to learn there was another woman in his life. She was devastated even more when Brooke confessed to being that woman. Stephanie got Eric to delay filing for a divorce. Donna overheard Stephanie tell Thorne Eric was giving their marriage another chance. Sally agreed not to pressure Clarke on her marriage proposal. Wait To See: Brooke makes a desperate decision.

DALLAS: J.R.'s scheme to force Cally to leave him took an unexpected turn that left him seething with anger. Bobby realized he now had to make a decision about his future that might not include April. Wait To See: Cally and James come up with another plan that could hit J.R. Ewing's ego where it hurts most.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Justin, unaware that Angelica hadn't taken the diamond piece, believed that she met Alexander died in the crash. Roman studied the pendant for Kayla's appeal, and agreed public opinion is for Jack. Meanwhile, Abe told Justin evidence proved Angelica was behind the bombing colleges, and Adrienne was not involved in the charges. Stuart and Julie learned Victor was behind his problems at WHGH. Isabella told Roman of the earrings Victor once gave her. Roman realized they matched the earring found in Marena's room. April went to China to be with Mike. Wait To See: Roman faces potentially devastating news about Isabella.

FALCON CREST: Sharpe knew how important it was to keep the secret about Daisy's accident. Julie decided to terminate Cordell Creek chance for him. Wait To See: Angie learns the truth.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: At the wedding, Duke, who had been shot by Julian, told Anna to get on with her life before dying in her arms. Kate, hoping Robert will stay, refused to postpone the wedding. In the Swiss Alps, Cesar Faison sent his assistant Desiree to Fort Charles to acquire Spoon Island while he set out to find Prince in Paris. Felicia was kidnapped, and would be held until Faison got Prince to find all the crystals. Heidi was shocked to learn Monica was divorcing Alan so he can marry Lucy — whose manipulations ultimately saved his neck after Ned called an emergency board meeting. Wait To See: Alan has some disgusting thoughts about marrying Lucy while Faison and Desiree worked towards their goals.

GENERATIONS: Adam learned Doreen had given birth and tried quintessentially to see her at the hospital. Later as he looked lovingly at his child through the nursery window, Martin appeared and announced he was the little girl's father. After Sam and Kyle made love, he broke the news that Mary was being released on a 12-hour furlough. Wait To See: Mary wants that moose head and what Mary wants, Mary's determined to get!

GUIDING LIGHT: A devastated Ralph begged Beth not to tell Ned he fathered her child. Dana discovered Flash in the fan, and as they struggled, Rae shot her. Gary hired a PI to watch Blake and find out whom Billy was going to meet. Meanwhile, Billy knocked down her idea of having Lenore fall diversely with a clothing line. Ross couldn't compete with Holly's hatred of Roger and walked out on her. Hayley learned Sam and Dylan were engaged. Wait To See: Frankie realizes he may love Dana Rooney.

Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Failure to be properly immunized against disease and failure to maintain immunization are rapidly becoming threats to the health of the American people. Federal, state, and local health agencies are becoming increasingly concerned about this problem.

Children between the ages of one and four are vaccinated against diphtheria, whooping cough, small pox, measles, infantile polio, measles and other communicable diseases. These diseases are particularly dangerous to those who are inadequately protected.

When reports are issued about the decline of serious infectious disease, a sense of complacency becomes apparent. This false sense of security is fraught with many dangers. The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga. has issued many warnings that at levels of immunizations are substantially lower than that which public health doctors would consider to be ideal. And unfortunately, the trend seems to continue downward.

It has been established that when there is less than 95 percent immunization in any area of the country, the risk of an epidemic becomes great. Each individual owes it to himself or herself, to the family and to the community, to be properly vaccinated against it in order to avoid its spread.

There are many who have forgotten the panic that raged through a community when the first case of poliomyelitis was reported in the spring. The physical and emotional devastation that followed an epidemic of polio must be remembered and never forgotten. Only in this way can those who are careless about immunization be impressed with the need for proper vaccination.

The creation of vaccines is probably one of the great scientific marvels of all time. It is pathetic that those accomplishments should be wasted by those who are careless about being vaccinated or maintaining that health preserving mechanism of proper immunization.

Proper immunization should be required for all school children by law.

Pet Care

by Cleo & Brad Conrad

It's time for Easter bonnets, pastel-colored eggs and sparkling new clothes. Winter is finally on its way to the rejuvenating time of year, many of us think of baby chicks, bunnies, ducks, etc. That's all well and good. However, we are here to strongly advise you not to take these creatures home as pets.

We realize it's difficult to resist those tiny balls of yellow fluff, or those fuzzy, white creatures with the twitchy pink noses and long ears. Indeed, any baby creature is hard to resist. However, what most people fail to think of is what happens when that adorable, tiny baby grows up (and they do this so quickly) to be an adult animal? Who will take care of it? In fact, is your household equipped to deal with an adult rabbit, chicken or duck?

Granted, rabbits make excellent pets. They are easily trainable and are very clean, well-behaved pets. However, most people are not well-versed in their care. As for chickens and ducks, unless you live on a farm, it's ludicrous to keep these animals for pets.

Please, if you want to give your kids an animal for Easter, stick to the stuffed variety. It's the most humane thing to do.

Happy Easter, everyone!
